

VASSAR TO HAVE NO PHIL DANCE

Self-Sacrificing Girls Abandon the Classic Event This Year in Order to Save Money for Their Alma Mater.

MR. ROCKEFELLER'S OFFER TO DOUBLE MONEY CAUSE.

Students Will Make $1,100 by Their Act for the College—There Will Also Be no Second Hall Play.

No "Phil" dance at Vassar this year. And all on account of John D. Rockefeller.

In all the annals of the classic woman's college at Poughkeepsie such a thing has never happened before. The young men friends of nine hundred and sixty bright college girls are in despair, but within the portals of beautiful Vassar as many young women are thinking of the great good which will result from this unprecedented sacrifice.

Yes, the "Phil" dance is not to be this year, and the reason arises only from such devotion and love of Alma Mater as a Vassar girl alone feels.

A short time ago a great mass-meeting was held at Vassar. Every girl was present with feelings of mingled sorrow and enthusiasm.

At the end of the meeting hundreds of young women filed from the assembly room with an expression of voluntary self-sacrifice on their faces, and the rumor was whispered abroad: "We've done it. No Phil dance."

Mr. Rockefeller's Offer.

When John D. Rockefeller made his offer to Vassar College to double any sum not exceeding $200,000 the college might raise there was intense enthusiasm among all Vassar girls, both alumnae and undergraduates.

"Vassar College needs a new dormitory and we want more instructors," said the girls. "Something must be done to capture John D. Rockefeller's offer."

Out in Chicago a big Vassar alumnae are preparing for a big bazaar, and the undergraduates set to work to make different articles to contribute to the cause.

"Girls, we must do something," said an enthusiastic senior. "Little things in the girls' rooms where fudge parties and o'clocks are held into insignificance before the important topic before us."

"There is one way we could raise nearly $500, girls," said an enterprising senior. "Give up the 'Phil' dance."

Fifty Vassar girls were alert at the proposition. "Give up the 'Phil' dance," said the originator of the scheme, and then retired behind a friendly soft cushion for protection.

The Girls Gave Up.

But the fifty Vassar girls only hesitated. Give up the dearest joy of every Vassar girl's heart! On only two occasions during each school year are Vassar girls permitted to entertain their men friends at a dance.

The Phil dance given the Friday following Thanksgiving is the fall one, and the dance on Founders' Day in the spring marks the occasion when Vassar girls enjoy the most of the two-step and the waltz while dancing with the fortunate young men who regard an invitation to the Vassar dances as a coveted prize.

The John D. Rockefeller offer is open until June. That means work for loyal Vassar girls who want to see a new dormitory coming up on the campus and a new bazaar. A mass meeting was called the Saturday morning. Every Vassar girl was present.

$1,100 Will Be Saved.

When the meeting was in full swing the enthusiasm of the 900 girls increased so rapidly that the cheering was of comparatively short length. By giving up the Phil dance at least $1,100 will have to be done to win John D. Rockefeller's offer.

Not only have the girls decided to give up the dance, but the Second Hall Play will not be presented. The First Hall Play is an event which brings back to college a large number of the preceding year's class. If a Vassar girl never visits her alma mater again in her life she will save and plan, if she be one of the girls who can not rely on a big bank account, to get back by some scheme to attend the First Hall Play. At that time the freedom of the college belongs to the alumnae.

To-Day First Hall Play Event.

To-day is the date of the first hall play, and over half of last year's class have returned to Vassar to attend.

As the second hall play, which usually takes place in December, has been abandoned, more than usual interest centres about the first hall play this year.

While the Vassar girls have made two big sacrifices, every spare moment is spent in trying to make ways to increase the Rockefeller fund. Girls gather in each other's rooms to make fancy articles, and since a large number have been sent out to Chicago for the big Vassar bazaar.

HIS BLONDE WIFE BEATS A BRUNETTE

That Is to Say, Mrs. De Rosa Falls Upon Mrs. Heckler Who She Says Has Stolen Her Husband's Affections.

"This woman tried to steal my husband's affections," said Mrs. Carrie de Rosa, a handsome young woman of blonde tendency, in Magistrate Smith's Court to-day. Long Island City. "She went around with him while he was delivering letters."

The woman referred to was Mrs. Pauline Heckler, equally as pretty, but a decided brunette in coloring. Mrs. Heckler showed the Magistrate an arm that was discolored as if from a beating. She charged Mrs. De Rosa with falling upon her in a Long Island City grocery store and subjecting her body to a fierce flailing.

Her story was that while she was in the grocery store yesterday Mrs. De Rosa came in and attacked her. She said that if it were not for the interference of the groceryman she was in a fair way to have lost her life. A fireman and another woman who were in the store at the time came to Mrs. Heckler's assistance and tore her away from the infuriated Mrs. De Rosa.

Jacob De Rosa, the husband, was in the court-room at the time, and Mrs. Heckler wanted him called to testify that the wife's charges were untrue and not founded on fact. "Why, I am a married woman myself," said Mrs. Heckler, "and I never go around with any men."

De Rosa is a letter-carrier. Both contestants live on the same block of Webster street, Long Island City.

Magistrate Smith adjourned the case until Friday next.

GIRLS WON'T WEAR THEM ALL, LIKE LILLIAN RUSSELL

Two Bayonne Misses Refuse to Pay Election Wager by Going Abroad in Men's Suits.

Two young women of Bayonne, N. J., have weighed in on an election bet made on the outcome of the city election there. They had a hot municipal campaign waged between Democrats and Fusionists and Miss Ella Barton, of No. 22 East Forty-third street, and Miss Fannie Warren, of No. 55 East Fourth street, were so worked up over the outcome that in a reckless moment they made a wager with Messrs. Thomas Wilson and Robert Thornton, two of the most popular beaux in Bayonne.

The wager was that if the Fusionists won the men were to don feminine garments loaned them by the girls and walk around a certain block. If the Democrats win the conditions were to be reversed.

The Democrats did win and Mr. Wilson sent his National Guard uniform around to Miss Warren's home and asked her to say when Mr. Thornton sent an ordinary business suit to Miss Barton. The young women met and declared they wouldn't play. They said they were willing to wear a man's overcoat and hat and parade, but they didn't intend going the whole business like Lillian Russell.

There are two kinds of emulsions of cod liver oil—Scott's and all the others. Not one of the latter is as valuable as Scott's Emulsion and there's a reason for it. Only the purest ingredients enter our Emulsion and its quality never varies. That is why it helps when all others fail.

There's not much oil in the market now; it's scarce and high in price. But seal oil and other inferior oils are cheap and plentiful. That's why you can buy so many substitutes for Scott's Emulsion at a lower price.

We guarantee our Emulsion to be the best remedy for weak lungs, low vitality and wasting conditions. Who guarantees the others?

We'll send you a sample free, upon request. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, N. Y.

LYNCH ASSAILANT OF N. Y. WOMAN

Negro Hanged by Louisiana Mob After Decoying Mrs. Labouisse, Formerly Mrs. S. Ogden Pell, Into Woods.

SHE VAINLY PROTESTED AGAINST THE LYNCHING.

Ruffian Grabbed Her and Held Knife to Her Throat While Demanding Money, but she Screamed for Aid.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Peter Labouisse, formerly Mrs. S. Ogden Pell, of New York, who was attacked by a negro yesterday near her home at Pass Christian, the negro being afterward lynched, did not to-day show much suffering from her encounter with the ruffian. She was quite nervous to-day, but this is attributed to the excitement consequent upon the lynching of her assailant, an action against which she protested and which she regrets.

Mrs. Labouisse was gathering wild flowers with her maid and had tied her horse to a tree near the roadside. Several negroes working in the fields saw

Sam Adams, a young negro, untie the horse and lead it into the woods. He then approached Mrs. Labouisse and told her the horse had become loose and had wandered into a clump of trees down by a creek. Mrs. Labouisse followed him and as she seized the horse's bridle Adams asked, "What do I get for this?" She said her purse was at home, but if he would call at her house she would reward him. The man grabbed her by the throat and drew a knife.

Threatened to Kill Her.

"If you make a noise I'll cut your throat," he said.

Despite his threats Mrs. Labouisse screamed and the negro became frightened and fled. Mr. Labouisse returned home and told the story.

A posse, composed of both white and colored men, started in chase and Adams was captured after several shots had been fired at him. When he was put in jail the feeling ran so high that the Sheriff decided to remove the prisoner to Mississippi. While he was being transferred by a constable an armed mob met them and demanded the prisoner. The constable gave him up and Adams was led to a big oak tree. He was given five minutes to pray and was then lynched, both whites and negroes pulling on the rope that cut his life short.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Townsend, of Babylon.

Mrs. Peter Labouisse is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Townsend, of Babylon, L. I. She was married to Samuel Ogden Pell, of New York, in 1890. She is noted for her beauty and was popular in society. A daughter was born to them and a few months later Mrs. Pell applied for a divorce. She secured a decree with the custody of her child and $250 a month alimony. One year later she married society by marrying Peter R. Labouisse.

Peter R. Labouisse is the son of Peter Labouisse, in his day the king of cotton speculation. After successfully engineering a corner in cotton in New York the older Labouisse became mentally deranged and died seven months before his son's marriage to Mrs. Pell.

All Next Week Is Given Over to Celebrating Our Double Birthday

Two anniversaries. Next Monday marks the forty-seventh year of the store's existence—and the first year of its developed scope beneath the roof of the largest building devoted to retailing.

It is not an occasion for rhetoric. You—the public—have done well by us—magnificently. We, on our part, did the best we could. But "our best," during the year just passed, was inadequate.

We acknowledge the flaws and mistakes frankly, because we wish you to know we know them. It's the first and most important effort toward improvement.

However, our shortcomings have not been in merchandise nor in prices. Those two interests have been closely watched. They, at least, have been and are supremely satisfactory.

Our imperfections were in the service—particularly in the delivery. But, under the conditions confronting us, they were practically unavoidable.

This straightforward announcement—an apology as it is—would be incomplete did we omit the extenuating circumstances surrounding us. We'll state them briefly:—

We closed the old establishment, moved over a million dollars' worth of merchandise, marked and placed in their respective departments nearly two million dollars' worth of new stocks and opened a store containing over twenty-four acres of floor space, ALL IN LESS THAN A WEEK'S TIME—and from the very first day you have literally overwhelmed us with business.

No organization could have handled such an enterprise smoothly at the start. We took on over two thousand new employees. They had to be instructed—taught our methods—and naturally the course of their education was punctuated with errors and friction.

Other problems had to be dealt with. All this required time. The influence and power of the store grew faster than our hands could work. We've a twelvemonth's perspective that will prove an invaluable aid to the next twelvemonth.

And now, just a word to those who have been irritated by the store's heretofore defective service. If you have read the foregoing you may realize, in faint measure, the tremendous difficulties we grappled. Give us another chance to vindicate ourselves. Gauge Macy's—not by the service it gave last year, but by the service it gives now—and during the hurry and hurrah of the holiday trade—which is the hardest test to which any store could be subjected.
